

Sat, 29 Dec 2012

3:26 AM

The Latest Trend About Maternity Clothes

Jenna Dewan-Tatum, former model and dancer turned actress, recently confirmed that she and husband Channing Tatum are expecting their first child. Of course, after purchasing a slew of baby name books, the first thing a new mom-to-be does is rush to revamp her wardrobe with a closet full of trendy maternity clothes.

She can usually be found wearing as little as possible in skimpy outfits for her raunchy live performances. But Jennifer Lopez went from sexy to studious on Thursday as she headed out wearing a pair of thick-rimmed black glasses. Jennifer teamed the wayfarer-style frames with a pair of hoop earrings, wearing her hair pulled back from her face in a high bun to further highlight her new accessory.

Seems like there have been rumors about Kate Middleton being pregnant since her wedding day. But today the palace has officially confirmed that the royal couple is expecting their first child.

Kate and Prince William's firstborn, whether it's a boy or a girl, will be next in line to inherit the throne of England. So you can well imagine how over the moon the entire country is.

Clearly, Kate will have no problem getting fabulous maternity couture for big events, should she need them for the upcoming holidays and through next spring: Her pals at Stella McCartney, Alexander McQueen and Alice Temperley will happily oblige at the drop of a Philip Treacy hat. The fashion maternity dress is necessary.

But as the UK's international style ambassador, Kate is known for mixing High Street with less expensive items. And she will continue to rely on sporty and casual maternity clothes, such as her favorite skinny leg jeans. Luckily, her favorites -- by J Brand -- do come in maternity sizes. And of course, she'll also be stocking up on baby clothes pretty soon. But that's getting about seven months ahead of ourselves.

Despite a long flight with two canines in tow, the Step Up star looked well rested and happy. As usual, the brunette beauty's makeup was understated, yet meticulously applied. Her perfectly plucked arched brows peeked over her dark shades, but when she removed her glasses for a doggy kiss, her eyes sparkled with just a hint of black mascara on her lashes. Completing her casual makeup application was a lovely shade of pink lipstick covering her full lips and showcasing her bright smile. We can also see that she often wear casual maternity dresses.

Before welcoming her second child â daughter Penelope - in July, the reality TV starlet was the queen of polished pregnancy looks. Whether it was at the latest Hollywood event or at the local farmerâs market, the reality TV mama did not disappoint. For her everyday maternity style, Kourt kept things casual chic in fitted duds showcasing her burgeoning belly, paired with the latest trends such as oversized handbags, fedoras, and blazers.

Not since Princess Dianaâs pregnancies in the early 1980s has the British maternity fashion world been so excited. Dianaâs style was decidedly more Sloane set meets Laura Ashley, with old-fashioned frilly floral prints and dots; ruffled, flouncy and wide sailor-style collars; and long sleeves and concealing silhouettes. But today, maternity clothing is far more revealing, slimmer and body-conscious. Bumps are no longer hidden, they are flaunted and wrapped in stretchy Lycra. Not that we think the Duchess would ever wear anything that could ever be considered inappropriate. And she'd never appear in any outfit that is too revealing of the royal baby-on-board.

The 43-year-old singer debuted her geek chic new look as she and toyboy boyfriend Casper Smart took her twins out in Beverly Hills. Jennifer opted for skinny jeans, black turtleneck and a furry waistcoat that kept her warm in the brisk weather on the day out. The former American Idol judge accessorised her chic outfit with a pair of black suede platform boots and an eye-catching large tan handbag.

You may interested on:

formal
maternity dresses

Security: Public

Location: Not Specified

Mood: Not Specified

Music: