SwitchEasy Ticker

Available in seven different colors, SwitchEasy's $25 Ticker is a good choice for those looking for a durable wristband for their iPod nano. The nano slips easily into the plastic band which provides full button access as well as access to the Nano's headphone jack. Perhaps the most interesting thing about the Ticker is that because of its sideways orientation, it provides easy access for both righties and southpaws. (

Aphipod Armpod SmartView Microtune

Amhipod's $25 Armpod SmartView Microtune is a good choice for those looking for a non-plastic wristband that can handle active use and exercise. Its elastic band easily adjusts to fit arms or thick wrists for a secure, comfortable fit. Its clear, soft Nano compartment protects your iPod from scratches without preventing touchscreen, button, headphone-jack, or dock-connector access.

Incase Flex Wristband

Incase's $50 Flex Wristband for iPod nano 6G is a great option for the Nano user who wants a simple strap but doesn't want colored plastic that's too bright for a natural rainbow. The Nano attaches to the Flex Wristband using a simple snap-in mechanism that allows for access to the iPod's buttons, headphone jack, and dock-connector port -- you can charge and sync without having to disconnect the Nano from the band. (
