Do you have pain when you are sitting, or itching and irritation around the anus area? If so, you may have hemorrhoids. Hemorrhoids can be painful and a real pain in the butt literally. There are several at home remedies and different creams that are offered as hemorrhoid treatment Los Angeles patients say, but if there is a severe case occurring, or at home treatments have not brought upon ease, seeing a hemorrhoid doctor is your best bet.

There are several different kinds of hemorrhoid treatment. One of which is performed is a hemorrhoidectomy Los Angeles doctors say is very affective. This option is taken when the hemorrhoids are very large and can be found internal and externally. During this procedure, the patient is given a general anesthesia so that they wont have to feel any pain. A scalpel is then used to cut the swollen vessels and the hemorrhoid is tied off at both ends to prevent bleeding during removal. After the hemorrhoid has been removed, the wound is either cauterized or sewn shut. A piece of medicated gauze is then used to cover the wound. This procedure can typically be an outpatient procedure, unless the patient has trouble urinating following the procedure. Click here for more information.

Another type of treatment that is used for hemorrhoids is called sclerotherapy. This procedure is performed by injecting a chemical directly into the hemorrhoid. This chemical will cause the veins walls within the hemorrhoid to collapse, essentially destroying the hemorrhoid. Also, in the case that the muscular tissue supporting the pelvis has been weakened, the PPH procedure will be used. The PPH procedure is short for procedure for prolapsed and hemorrhoids. When the muscle supporting the pelvis is weakened, hemorrhoid tissue can begin to protrude. When PPH is performed, an internal tucking and stapling is done to restore the hemorrhoid tissue to its natural position.

If your hemorrhoids are not serious and do not need these types of procedures there are at home treatments that can be used such as hot and cold therapy, aspirin or ibuprofen, over the counter creams, or enjoy a sitz bath. Again, if your hemorrhoid symptoms begin to worsen even after trying at home treatment, you may need to see a doctor. Even if they dont recommend a hemorrhoidectomy or sclerotherapy, they will be able to lead you in the right direction and get you the relief that you need.
