Apple debuted its first iPad commercial at this year's Oscars, and the buzz has left several of you trying to identify the name of the iPad commercial song, and the band behind it.

The name of iPad commercial song is "There Goes My Love" by Denmark guitar-rock band The Blue Van. The track bears a striking resemblance to Franz Ferdinand and The Fratellis, also guitar rockers from over-the-pond that have both been used in Apple's iPod commercials.

Download the iPad music here: Best MP3 Mix, and iPad Transfer software can help you to transfer stuff to computer freely. For Mac users, see the iPad to Mac transfer.

More about the iPad Commercial Song Artist - Blue Van

The Blue Van was founded in Brønderslev, Denmark when the members were in the 6th grade at school. Their first album, The Art of Rolling, was released in April 2005. Their second album, Dear Independence, was released in October 2006. Fans were treated to early renditions of "Rico" "The Odyssey" and "Don't Leave Me Blue".

The band has also gained renown in the United States, due mainly to numerous shows in and around New York City preceding the release of The Art of Rolling, as well as their participation in events such as Austin City Limits Music Festival. In the first quarter of 2007, the band announced that they would be going into a recluse state in a farm house to write material for their 3rd album. "Silly Boy", the lead single from their third album Man Up, was featured in a 2008 US commercial for the Samsung Behold cell phone. "There Goes My Love", a single, was used in a debut Apple iPad commercial during the 2010 Oscars.

Design Mystery of iCloud Icon

The
cloud computing platforms iCloud on Apple WWDC is the leading role of the influence of the industry, it is also recently debated. Japanese designer, Takamasa I.rev. long Matsumoto analyzed the iCloud icon, and found a note of some secret. This seemingly irregular icon, but a geometry and perfect

application of the golden section.

This is the the original icon of Apple:

<http://www.ipad-transfer.com/images/resources/original-icloud.jpg>

The
original irregular cloud shape is seemingly made up of four rounds.

The
circles in the 'puffs' of the iCloud are sized in a ratio of 1:1.6, an approximation of golden ratio, as discovered by Australian designer Alan van Roemburg. It seems unlikely the proportion was unintentional; Apple's artists simply have an acute sense of the history of design and mathematics.

<http://www.ipad-transfer.com/images/resources/golden-ratio-icloud.jpg>

The
golden ratio has been around since at least Euclid and Pythagoras. Fans of the Da Vinci Code should know it too, as Dan Brown has referenced ϕ several times in his books. No wonder iCloud seems so elegant and aesthetically pleasing.
