Many Kindle 3G users wanna know how to read Gmail on Kindle. Well, the browser built-in to Amazon Kindle has very limited capabilities, but even with those limited capabilities, you can still access the mobile version of Gmail. Here is how to read Gmail in Kindle 3G.

More
about Kindle 3G:

The Kindle 3G device is marketed as a wireless e-book reader. Its best feature is a free broadband wireless connection, which is designed to let you browse and buy books, as well as subscribe to magazines, blogs and daily newspapers, which are downloaded automatically.

Tips:

If you like reading
on Kindle, then a best drm
remover is needed to remove kindle drm.

Guide: How Can I
Read Gmail in Kindle 3G Step by Step?

Step
1:

Change Basic Web
browser to Experimental Mode

Firstly, turn on your Kindle 3G and then, go to Menu > Experimental > Basic Web. This step will open the Kindle 3G's web browser. Basic Gmail functionality is accessible from the Amazon Kindle and navigating the interface takes some getting used to but with a little bit of practice, you can easily read and write emails from Gmail using the Amazon Kindle.

Step
2:

Utilize the Mobile
Gmail Page for Best Viewing

When your Kindle
browser has opened, go to Menu > Settings.

Step
3:

Navigating Gmail
with Amazon Kindle

Navigate to the Menu item "Enable Javascript".

(By the way,

Gmail requires Javascript to work. If Javascript is not enabled then you will get an error message when trying to access your Gmail account.)

Step
4:

Close the Settings
window.

Go to Menu >
Enter URL and then enter http://m.gmail.com, this is important, if you use the Kindle's default shortcut or bookmark for Google you will get the Google "PDA" or mobile edition. Log into the Gmail site with your existing user name and password, you should now be logged into Gmail and ready to read and send e-mail messages.

Furthermore,
using Gmail on Kindle 3G is slow, even slower than on a mobile phone. However, the page is much bigger than the phones. So reading on Kindle 3G is on balance better than on most cell phones.

Macotakara claimed last month that Apple would hold an event in February to unveil the so-called "iPad 3" and iOS 5.1, citing both an Asian supplier and a source in the U.S.
However, blogger Danbo has now corrected the original claim as only telling a "half-side of truth.".

According to him, Apple will indeed hold an event in February, but it will be a "Strange" event rather than a full product launch. The author was unable to provide further details on what exactly a strange event would entail.

One possibility is that the rumored February event could contain industry-related announcements similar to how last month's education event in New York City to mark the release of iBooks 2 and iBooks Author without showing off new hardware.

"Special Event for new products will be hold in early March and will release products during March as usual," Danbo continued.

The publication's most-recent corrections put its insider information more in line with other reports that have pegged March as the month that Apple will release its new iPad

, similar to last year. Bloomberg reported last month that production for the next-gen iPad was already underway ahead of a March launch. That report also claimed that the device would feature a high-resolution display, LTE compatibility and a quad-core processor. Rumors out of Taiwan have also pointed to March as the time frame for the launch.

The third-generation iPad is generally believed to feature a doubled-resolution display with a pixel density of 254 pixels per inch. Apple is also expected to unveil its next-generation A6 processor alongside the next iPad as it did with the A5 and the iPad 2 last year (ipad tips: convert video to ipad).

As for iOS 5.1, a beta release of the software provided by Apple to developers appears to contain references to deep Facebook integration similar to system-wide elements for Twitter that the company built into iOS 5.
